WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Dinner, games and dances—and then more dinners, debutantes and more dancing—is the most popular form of entertaining for the small set of Washington society and during the season most of the social elite hardly ever sat at a dinner unless they themselves have been guests. During the past week were dinners galore. A trio of three balls, with a number of dances and many tea dances between.

One of the most picturesque parties of the week was the one given by Mrs. B. Henderson for the members of the Congressional club with their friends and a few of Mrs. Henderson's friends from the diplomatic corps and resident society. This took place in the handsome new house at 1613 B Street, N. W., which Mrs. Henderson has just completed and which is designed primarily for an embassy or legation.
